On February 9, 2007, Karsten Pohl, an Associate Professor of Physics at UNH, visited Winnacunnet High School to give a Nanotechnology presentation to Adam Edgar’s AP Physics class. The students really enjoyed his presentation and many commented that they really appreciated the way he was able to explain very difficult concepts clearly and concisely, while at the same time not talking "down" to them.

For information about having nanotechnology presentations at your school, contact Sue Greenberg at susan.greenberg@unh.edu.